

*515 U.S. 277, **; *115 S. Ct. 2137, ***;
*132 L. Ed. 2d 214, ****; 1995 U.S. LEXIS 3908

LESLIE WILTON, ETC., ET AL., PETITIONERS v. SEVEN FALLS COMPANY ET AL.

No. 94-562

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

515 U.S. 277; 115 S. Ct. 2137; 132 L. Ed. 2d 214; 1995 U.S. LEXIS 3908; 63 U.S.L.W. 4544;
95 Cal. Daily Op. Service 4406; 95 Daily Journal DAR 7487

March 27, 1995, Argued
June 12, 1995, Decided

PRIOR HISTORY: ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FIFTH CIRCUIT.

DISPOSITION: 41 F.3d 934, affirmed.

CASE SUMMARY:

PROCEDURAL POSTURE: Petitioner sought certiorari from decision of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, which had affirmed a stay on motion from respondents in an action brought by petitioners seeking a declaration under the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C.S. § 2201(a). Certiorari was granted to resolve conflicts concerning district court decisions to stay declaratory judgment actions in favor of parallel state litigation.

OVERVIEW: Petitioner filed proceeding seeking a declaration under the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C.S. § 2201(a), that their commercial liability insurance policies did not cover respondent's liability concerning the ownership and operation of oil and gas properties. The district court entered a stay and observed that a state lawsuit encompassed the same coverage issues raised in the declaratory judgment action and determined that a stay was warranted in order to avoid piecemeal litigation and to bar forum shopping. The court of appeals reviewed the district court's decision for abuse of discretion, and found none and affirmed the stay. Petitioner argued that district courts must point to "exceptional circumstances" to justify staying or dismissing proceedings. The court held that distinct features of the Act justified a standard vesting district courts with greater discretion in declaratory judgment actions than that permitted under the "exceptional circumstances" test. The court held that district court's decisions about the propriety of hearing declaratory judgment actions should be reviewed only for abuse of discretion and found that the district court acted properly.

OUTCOME: The court affirmed the judgment.

CORE TERMS: declaratory judgment, underwriters, exceptional circumstances, state proceedings, abuse of discretion, staying, declaratory relief, presenting, plurality's, pendency, abuse of discretion, declaratory, ventilation, declaration, hear, federal law, de novo, articulated, entertain, piecemeal, coverage, declare, breadth, fitness, insurer, confer, outset, state law, joined, refused to defend

LEXISNEXIS(R) HEADNOTES

Civil Procedure > Jurisdiction > Jurisdictional Sources > General Overview

Civil Procedure > Declaratory Judgment Actions > Federal Judgments > General Overview

HN1 ⚡ Ordinarily it will be uneconomical as well as vexatious for a federal court to proceed in a declaratory judgment suit where another suit is pending in a state court presenting the same issues, not governed by federal law, between the same parties. The question for a district court presented with a suit under the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C.S. § 2201(a), is whether the questions in controversy between the parties to the federal suit, and which are not foreclosed under the applicable substantive law, can better be settled in the proceeding pending in the state court.

Civil Procedure > Declaratory Judgment Actions > Federal Judgments > Discretion

Civil Procedure > Declaratory Judgment Actions > Federal Judgments > Factors

HN2 ⚡ District courts possess discretion in determining whether and when to entertain an action under the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C.S. 2201(a) even when the suit otherwise satisfies subject matter jurisdictional prerequisites.

Civil Procedure > Parties > Joinder > Necessary Parties

Civil Procedure > Declaratory Judgment Actions > Federal Judgments > Factors

HN3 ⚡ In deciding whether to enter a stay, a district court should examine the scope of the pending state court proceeding and the nature of defenses open there. This inquiry, in turn, entails consideration of whether the claims of all parties in interest can satisfactorily be adjudicated in that proceeding, whether necessary parties have been joined, whether such parties are amenable to process in that proceeding, etc. Other cases might shed light on additional factors governing a district court's decision to stay or to dismiss a declaratory judgment action at the outset. But at least where another suit involving the same parties and presenting opportunity for ventilation of the same state law issues is pending in state court, a district court might be indulging in gratuitous interference if it permitted the federal declaratory action to proceed.

Civil Procedure > Declaratory Judgment Actions > Federal Judgments > Discretion

HN4 ⚡ Distinct features of the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C.S. § 2201(a), justify a standard vesting district courts with greater discretion in declaratory judgment actions than that permitted under the "exceptional circumstances" test.

Civil Procedure > Declaratory Judgment Actions > Federal Judgments > Discretion

HN5 ⚡ The Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C.S. § 2201(a), has been understood to confer on federal courts unique and substantial discretion in deciding whether to declare the rights of litigants.

Civil Procedure > Declaratory Judgment Actions > Federal Judgments > Discretion

Civil Procedure > Declaratory Judgment Actions > State Judgments > Discretion

HN6 ⚡ The Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C.S. § 2201(a), is an enabling Act, which confers a discretion on the courts rather than an absolute right upon the litigant.

Civil Procedure > Declaratory Judgment Actions > Federal Judgments > Discretion

HN7 ⚡ Consistent with the nonobligatory nature of the remedy, a district court is authorized, in the sound exercise of its discretion, to stay or to dismiss an action seeking a declaratory judgment before trial or after all arguments have drawn to a close. In the declaratory judgment context, the normal principle that federal courts should adjudicate claims within their jurisdiction yields to considerations of practicality and wise judicial administration.

DECISION:

Discretionary standard held to govern Federal District Court's stay of declaratory judgment action under 28 USCS 2201(a) while parallel state proceedings are pending; District Court's decision under 2201(a) held reviewable for abuse of discretion.

SUMMARY:

When litigation over the ownership and operation of oil and gas properties in Winkler County, Texas, appeared likely, a group of liability insurance policyholders asked the insurers who had issued the policies to them to provide them with coverage under their policies. The insurers refused to defend or indemnify the policyholders, and litigation over the properties ensued. After a Winkler County jury entered a verdict in excess of $ 100 million against the policyholders on various state law claims, the policyholders gave notice of the verdict to the insurers. The insurers then filed an action in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas, in which action the insurers sought a declaration, under a provision of the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 USCS 2201(a), that their policies did not cover the policyholders' liability for the state court judgment. The insurers voluntarily dismissed the action after negotiation. However, when the policyholders notified the insurers of their intention to file a state court action on the policies in Travis County, Texas, the insurers refiled their 2201(a) action in the same Federal District Court. A month later, the policyholders (1) filed the previously noticed action in Travis County, and (2) moved in Federal District Court to dismiss or stay the insurers' 2201(a) action. The District Court, entering a stay, expressed the view that (1) the Travis County suit encompassed the same coverage issues raised in the 2201(a) action, and (2) a stay was warranted in order to avoid piecemeal litigation and to bar the insurers' attempt at forum shopping. On appeal, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, affirming, held that the District Court (1) had broad discretion to grant, or decline to grant, a declaratory judgment, and (2) had not abused its discretion (41 F3d 934).

On certiorari, the United States Supreme Court affirmed. In an opinion by O'Connor, J., expressing the unanimous view of the eight participating members of the court, it was held that (1) the discretionary standard of Brillhart v Excess Ins. Co. (1942) 316 US 491, 86 L Ed 1620, 62 S Ct 1173, governed a District Court's decision to stay a declaratory judgment action brought under 2201(a) during the pendency of parallel state court proceedings; (2) decisions by District Courts about the propriety of hearing actions brought under 2201(a) were to be reviewed for abuse of discretion; and (3) the District Court did not abuse its discretion in the case at hand, where parallel proceedings, presenting opportunity for ventilation of the same state law issues involved in the federal action, were underway in state court.

Breyer, J., did not participate.

LAWYERS' EDITION HEADNOTES:

[***LEdHN1]

DECLARATORY JUDGMENTS §3

discretion of Federal District Court -- stay -- parallel state proceedings --

Headnote: [LEdHN\[1A\]](#) [\[1A\]](#) [LEdHN\[1B\]](#) [\[1B\]](#) [LEdHN\[1C\]](#) [\[1C\]](#) [LEdHN\[1D\]](#) [\[1D\]](#)

The discretionary standard of Brillhart v Excess Ins. Co. (1942) 316 US 491, 86 L Ed 1620, 62 S Ct 1173, governs a Federal District Court's decision to stay a declaratory judgment action brought under a provision of the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 USCS 2201(a), during the pendency of parallel state court proceedings, because (1) Brillhart v Excess Ins. Co. makes clear that District Courts possess discretion in determining whether and when to entertain an action under 2201(a), even when the suit otherwise satisfies subject matter jurisdictional prerequisites; (2) distinct features of 2201(a)--which on its face provides that a court "may" declare the rights and other legal relations of any interested party seeking such declaration--justify a standard vesting District Courts with greater discretion in declaratory judgment actions than that permitted under a test developed in United States Supreme Court cases which allows federal courts to abstain from exercising jurisdiction only in "exceptional" circumstances; and (3) 2201(a)'s textual commitment to discretion, and the breadth of leeway which it always has been understood to suggest, distinguish the declaratory judgment context from other areas of the law in which concepts of discretion surface.

[***LEdHN2]

APPEAL §1382

review -- declaratory judgment action -- abuse of discretion --

Headnote: [LEdHN\[2A\]](#) [LEdHN\[2B\]](#) [LEdHN\[2C\]](#)

Decisions by Federal District Courts about the propriety of hearing actions brought under a provision of the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 USCS 2201(a)--which decisions are necessarily bound up with the District Courts' decisions about the propriety of granting declaratory relief--are to be reviewed for abuse of discretion, because (1) it is more consistent with 2201(a) to vest District Courts with discretion in the first instance than to review such decisions de novo, in that facts bearing on the usefulness of the declaratory judgment remedy, and the fitness of the case for resolution, are peculiarly within the District Courts' grasp; and (2) proper application of the abuse of discretion standard on appellate review can provide appropriate guidance to District Courts.

[***LEdHN3]

APPEAL §1382

review -- stay of declaratory judgment action -- parallel state proceedings --

Headnote: [LEdHN\[3A\]](#) [LEdHN\[3B\]](#)

A Federal District Court acts within its bounds and, thus, does not abuse its discretion for purposes of appellate review, in staying an action brought under a provision of the Declaratory Judgment Act (28 USCS 2201(a)) where parallel proceedings, presenting opportunity for ventilation of the same state law issues involved in the federal action, are underway in state court.

[***LEdHN4]

JUDGMENT §121

res judicata -- insurance liability --

Headnote: [LEdHN\[4\]](#)

A state court's decision, in a pending action brought against insurers who had refused to defend or indemnify policyholders in a prior state court suit, will bind the parties under principles of res judicata in an action brought by the insurers in Federal District Court under a provision of the Declaratory Judgment Act (28 USCS 2201(a)), where (1) the insurers seek a declaration that their policies do not cover the policyholders' liability for a judgment in the prior suit, and (2) the Federal District Court has stayed the action.

[***LEdHN5]

DECLARATORY JUDGMENTS §10

stay -- dismissal --

Headnote: [LEdHN\[5\]](#) [5]

If a Federal District Court, in the sound exercise of its judgment, determines after a complaint is filed that a declaratory judgment will serve no useful purpose, it cannot be incumbent upon that court to proceed to the merits before staying or dismissing the action.

[***LEdHN6]

DECLARATORY JUDGMENTS §3

discretion -- stay -- dismissal --

Headnote: [LEdHN\[6\]](#) [6]

Consistent with the nonobligatory nature of the declaratory judgment remedy, a Federal District Court is authorized, in the sound exercise of its discretion, to stay or to dismiss an action seeking a declaratory judgment before trial or after all arguments have drawn to a close; in the declaratory judgment context, the normal principle that federal courts should adjudicate claims within their jurisdiction yields to considerations of practicality and wise judicial administration.

SYLLABUS

Petitioner underwriters refused to defend or indemnify respondents under several commercial liability insurance policies in litigation between respondents and other parties over the ownership and operation of certain Texas oil and gas properties. After a verdict was entered against respondents and they notified petitioners that they intended to file a state court suit on the policies, petitioners sought a declaratory judgment in federal court that their policies did not cover respondents' liability. Respondents filed their state court suit and moved to dismiss or, in the alternative, to stay petitioners' action. The District Court entered a stay on the ground that the state suit encompassed the same coverage issues raised in the federal action, and the Court of Appeals affirmed. Noting that a district court has broad discretion to grant or decline to grant declaratory judgment, the court did not require application of the test articulated in Colorado River Water Conservation Dist. v. United States, 424 U.S. 800, 47 L. Ed. 2d 483, 96 S. Ct. 1236, and Moses H. Cone Memorial Hospital v. Mercury Constr. Corp., 460 U.S. 1, 74 L. Ed. 2d 765, 103 S. Ct. 927, under which district courts must point to "exceptional circumstances" to justify staying or dismissing federal proceedings. The court reviewed the District Court's decision for abuse of discretion, and found none.

Held:

1. The discretionary standard of Brillhart v. Excess Ins. Co. of America, 316 U.S. 491, 86 L. Ed. 1620, 62 S. Ct. 1173, governs a district court's decision to stay a declaratory judgment action during the pendency of parallel state court proceedings. Pp. 282-288.

(a) In addressing circumstances virtually identical to those present here, the Court in Brillhart made clear that district courts possess discretion in determining whether and when to entertain an action under the Declaratory Judgment Act (Act), even when the suit otherwise satisfies subject matter jurisdiction. While Brillhart did not set out an exclusive list of factors governing the exercise of this discretion, it did provide some guidance, indicating that, at least where another suit involving the same parties and presenting opportunity for ventilation of the same state law issues is pending in state court, a district court might be indulging in gratuitous interference if it permitted the federal declaratory action to proceed. Pp. 282-283.

(b) The Act's distinct features justify a standard vesting district courts with greater discretion in declaratory judgment actions than that permitted under the "exceptional circumstances" test set forth in Colorado River and Moses H. Cone, neither of which dealt with declaratory judgments. On its face, the Act makes a textual commitment to discretion by specifying that a court "may" declare litigants' rights, 28 U.S.C. § 2201(a) (emphasis added), and it has repeatedly been characterized as an enabling Act, which confers a discretion on the courts rather than an absolute right upon the litigant. Pp. 283-287.

(c) Petitioners' argument that, despite the unique breadth of this discretion, district courts lack discretion to decline to hear a declaratory judgment suit at the outset depends on the untenable proposition that a court, knowing at the litigation's commencement that it will exercise its discretion to decline declaratory relief, must nonetheless go through the futile exercise of hearing a case on the merits first. Nothing in the Act recommends this reading, and the Court is unwilling to impute to Congress an intention to require such a wasteful expenditure of judicial resources. Pp. 287-288.

2. District courts' decisions about the propriety of hearing declaratory judgment actions should be reviewed for abuse of discretion, not de novo. It is more consistent with the Act to vest district courts with discretion in the first instance, because facts bearing on the declaratory judgment remedy's usefulness, and the case's fitness for resolution, are particularly within their grasp. Proper application of the abuse of discretion standard on appeal can provide appropriate guidance to district courts. Pp. 288-289.

3. The District Court acted within its bounds in staying the declaratory relief action in this case, since parallel proceedings, presenting opportunity for ventilation of the same state law issues, were underway in state court. Pp. 289-290.

41 F.3d 934, affirmed.

O'CONNOR, J., delivered the opinion of the Court, in which all other Members joined, except BREYER, J., who took no part in the consideration or decision of the case.

COUNSEL: Michael A. Orlando argued the cause for petitioners. With him on the briefs were Patrick C. Appel and Paul LeRoy Crist.

Werner A. Powers argued the cause for respondents. With him on the brief was Charles C. Keeble, Jr. *

* Laura A. Foggan, Daniel E. Troy, and Thomas W. Brunner filed a brief for the Insurance Environmental Litigation Association as amicus curiae urging reversal.

Edward F. LeBreton III filed a brief for the Maritime Law Association as amicus curiae.

JUDGES: O'CONNOR, J., delivered the opinion of the Court, in which all other Members joined, except BREYER, J., who took no part in the consideration or decision of the case.

OPINION BY: O'CONNOR

OPINION

[*279] [**2139] [***218] JUSTICE O'CONNOR delivered the opinion of the Court.

[***LEdHR1A] LEdHN[1A]<sup>1</sup>[1A] [***LEdHR2A] LEdHN[2A]<sup>2</sup>[2A] [***LEdHR3A] LEdHN[3A]<sup>3</sup>[3A] This case asks whether the discretionary standard set forth in Brillhart v. Excess Ins. Co. of America, 316 U.S. 491, 86 L. Ed. 1620, 62 S. Ct. 1173 (1942), or the "exceptional circumstances" test developed in Colorado River Water Conservation Dist. v. United States, 424 U.S. 800, 47 L. Ed. 2d 483, 96 S. Ct. 1236 (1976), and Moses H. Cone Memorial Hospital v. Mercury Constr. Corp., 460 U.S. 1, 74 L. Ed. 2d 765, 103 S. Ct. 927 (1983), governs a district court's decision to stay a declaratory judgment action during the pendency of parallel state court proceedings, and under what standard of review a court of appeals should evaluate the district court's decision to do so.

[***219] I

In early 1992, a dispute between respondents (the Hill Group) and other parties over the ownership and operation of oil and gas properties in Winkler County, Texas, appeared likely to culminate in litigation. The Hill Group asked petitioners (London Underwriters) <sup>1</sup> to provide them with coverage under several commercial liability insurance policies. London Underwriters refused to defend or indemnify the Hill Group in a letter dated July 31, 1992. In September 1992, after a 3-week trial, a Winkler County jury entered a verdict in excess of $ 100 million against the Hill Group on various state law claims.

FOOTNOTES

<sup>1</sup> For the sake of clarity, we adopt the Court of Appeals' manner of referencing the parties.

The Hill Group gave London Underwriters notice of the verdict in late November 1992. On December 9, 1992, London [*280] Underwriters filed suit in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas, basing jurisdiction upon diversity of citizenship under 28 U.S.C. § 1332. London Underwriters sought a declaration under the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2201(a) (1988 ed., Supp. V), that their policies did not cover the Hill Group's liability for the Winkler County judgment. After negotiations with the Hill Group's counsel, London Underwriters voluntarily dismissed the action on January 22, 1993. London Underwriters did so, however, upon the express condition that the Hill Group give London Underwriters two weeks' notice if they decided to bring suit on the policy.

On February 23, 1993, the Hill Group notified London Underwriters of their intention to file such a suit in Travis County, Texas. London Underwriters refiled their declaratory judgment action in the Southern District of Texas on February 24, 1993. As promised, the Hill Group initiated an action against London Underwriters on March 26, 1993, in state court in Travis County. The Hill Group's codefendants in the Winkler County litigation joined in this suit and asserted claims against certain Texas insurers, thus rendering the parties nondiverse and the suit nonremovable.

On the same day that the Hill Group filed their Travis County action, they moved to dismiss or, in the alternative, to stay London Underwriters' federal declaratory judgment action. After receiving submissions from the parties on the issue, the District Court entered a stay on June 30, 1993. The District Court observed that the state lawsuit pending in Travis County encompassed the same coverage issues raised in the declaratory judgment action and determined that a stay was warranted in order to avoid piecemeal litigation and to bar London Underwriters' attempts at forum shopping. London Underwriters filed a timely appeal. See Moses H. Cone Memorial Hospital, supra, at 10 [**2140] (a district court's order staying federal proceedings in favor of pending [*281] state litigation is a "final decision" appealable under 28 U.S.C. § 1291).

The United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit affirmed. 41 F.3d 934 (1994). Noting that under Circuit precedent, "[a] district court has broad discretion to grant (or decline to grant) declaratory judgment," id., at 935, [***220] citing Torch, Inc. v. LeBlanc, 947 F.2d 193, 194 (CA5 1991), the Court of Appeals did not require application of the test articulated in Colorado River, supra, and Moses H. Cone, supra, under which district courts must point to "exceptional circumstances" to justify staying or dismissing federal proceedings. Citing the interests in avoiding duplicative proceedings and forum shopping, the Court of Appeals reviewed the District Court's decision for abuse of discretion, and found none. 41 F.3d at 935.

We granted certiorari, 513 U.S. 1013 (1994), to resolve Circuit conflicts concerning the standard governing a district court's decision to stay a declaratory judgment action in favor of parallel state litigation, compare, e. g., Employers Ins. of Wausau v. Missouri Elec. Works, 23 F.3d 1372, 1374, n. 3 (CA8 1994) (pursuant to Colorado River and Moses H. Cone, a district court may not stay or dismiss a declaratory judgment action absent "exceptional circumstances"); Lumbermens Mut. Casualty Co. v. Connecticut Bank & Trust, 806 F.2d 411, 413 (CA2 1986) (same), with Travelers Ins. Co. v. Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation, Inc., 996 F.2d 774, 778, n. 12 (CA5 1993) (the "exceptional circumstances" test of Colorado River and Moses H. Cone is inapplicable in declaratory judgment actions); Mitcheson v. Harris, 955 F.2d 235, 237-238 (CA4 1992) (same), and the applicable standard for an appellate court's review of a district court's decision to stay a declaratory judgment action, compare, e. g., United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Murphy Oil USA, Inc., 21 F.3d 259, 263, n. 5 (CA8 1994) (reviewing for abuse of discretion); Christopher P. v. Marcus, 915 F.2d 794, 802 (CA2 1990) (same), with Genentech, Inc. v. Eli Lilly & Co., 998 [*282] F.2d 931, 936 (CA Fed. 1993) (reviewing de novo); Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. Holbrook, 867 F.2d 1330, 1333 (CA11 1989) (same). We now affirm.

II

Over 50 years ago, in Brillhart v. Excess Ins. Co. of America, 316 U.S. 491, 86 L. Ed. 1620, 62 S. Ct. 1173 (1942), this Court addressed circumstances virtually identical to those present in the case before us today. An insurer, anticipating a coercive suit, sought a declaration in federal court of nonliability on an insurance policy. The District Court dismissed the action in favor of pending state garnishment proceedings, to which the insurer had been added as a defendant. The Court of Appeals reversed, finding an abuse of discretion, and ordered the District Court to proceed to the merits. Reversing the Court of Appeals and remanding to the District Court, this Court held that, "although the District Court had jurisdiction of the suit under the Federal Declaratory Judgments Act, it was under no compulsion to exercise that jurisdiction." Id., at 494. The Court explained that HN1 "ordinarily it would be uneconomical as well as vexatious for a federal court to proceed in a declaratory judgment suit where another suit is pending in a state court presenting the same issues, not governed by federal law, between the same parties." Id., at 495. The question for a district court presented with a suit under the Declaratory Judgment Act, the Court found, is "whether the questions in controversy between the parties to the federal suit, and which are not foreclosed under the applicable substantive law, can better be [***221] settled in the proceeding pending in the state court." Ibid.

[***LEdHR1B] LEdHN[1B] HN2 [1B] Brillhart makes clear that district courts possess discretion in determining whether and when to entertain an action under the Declaratory Judgment Act, even when the suit otherwise satisfies subject matter jurisdictional prerequisites.

Although Brillhart did not set out an exclusive list of factors governing the district court's exercise of this discretion, it did provide some useful guidance in that regard. [*283] The Court indicated, [**2141] for example, that HN3 in deciding whether to enter a stay, a district court should examine "the scope of the pending state court proceeding and the nature of defenses open there." Ibid. This inquiry, in turn, entails consideration of "whether the claims of all parties in interest can satisfactorily be adjudicated in that proceeding, whether necessary parties have been joined, whether such parties are amenable to process in that proceeding, etc." Ibid. Other cases, the Court noted, might shed light on additional factors governing a district court's decision to stay or to dismiss a declaratory judgment action at the outset. See ibid. But Brillhart indicated that, at least where another suit involving the same parties and presenting opportunity for ventilation of the same state law issues is pending in state court, a district court might be indulging in "gratuitous interference," ibid., if it permitted the federal declaratory action to proceed.

[***LEdHR4] LEdHN[4] [4]Brillhart, without more, clearly supports the District Court's decision in this case. (That the court here stayed, rather than dismissed, the action is of little moment in this regard, because the state court's decision will bind the parties under principles of res judicata.) Nonetheless, London Underwriters argue, and several Courts of Appeals have agreed, that intervening case law has supplanted Brillhart's notions of broad discretion with a test under which district courts may stay or dismiss actions properly within their jurisdiction only in "exceptional circumstances." In London Underwriters' view, recent cases have established that a district court must point to a compelling reason--which, they say, is lacking here--in order to stay a declaratory judgment action in favor of pending state proceedings. To evaluate this argument, it is necessary to examine three cases handed down several decades after Brillhart.

In Colorado River Water Conservation Dist. v. United States, 424 U.S. 800, 47 L. Ed. 2d 483, 96 S. Ct. 1236 (1976), the Government brought an action in Federal District Court under 28 U.S.C. § 1345 seeking [*284] a declaration of its water rights, the appointment of a water master, and an order enjoining all uses and diversions of water by other parties. See Pet. for Cert. in Colorado River Water Conservation Dist. v. United States, O. T. 1974, No. 74-940, pp. 39a-40a. The District Court dismissed the action in deference to ongoing state proceedings. The Court of Appeals reversed, 504 F.2d 115 (CA10 1974), on the ground that the District Court had jurisdiction over the Government's suit and that abstention was inappropriate. This Court reversed again. Without discussing Brillhart, the Court began with the premise that federal courts have a "virtually unflagging obligation" to exercise the jurisdiction conferred on them by Congress. Colorado River, supra, at 813, 817-818, [***222] citing Cohens v. Virginia, 19 U.S. 264, 6 Wheat. 264, 404, 5 L. Ed. 257 (1821). The Court determined, however, that a district court could nonetheless abstain from the assumption of jurisdiction over a suit in "exceptional" circumstances, and it found such exceptional circumstances on the facts of the case. 424 U.S. at 818-820. Specifically, the Court deemed dispositive a clear federal policy against piecemeal adjudication of water rights; the existence of an elaborate state scheme for resolution of such claims; the absence of any proceedings in the District Court, other than the filing of the complaint, prior to the motion to dismiss; the extensive nature of the suit; the 300-mile distance between the District Court and the situs of the water district at issue; and the prior participation of the Federal Government in related state proceedings.

Two years after Colorado River we decided Will v. Calvert Fire Ins. Co., 437 U.S. 655, 57 L. Ed. 2d 504, 98 S. Ct. 2552 (1978), in which a plurality of the Court stated that, while "the pendency of an action in the state court is no bar to proceedings concerning the same matter in the Federal court having jurisdiction," id., at 662, quoting McClellan v. Carland, 217 U.S. 268, 282, 54 L. Ed. 762, 30 S. Ct. 501 (1910), a district court is "under no compulsion to exercise that jurisdiction," 437 U.S. at 662, quoting Brillhart, 316 [*285] U.S. at 494. Will concerned an action seeking damages for an alleged violation of federal securities laws brought in federal court during the pendency of related [**2142] state proceedings. Although the case arose outside the declaratory judgment context, the plurality invoked Brillhart as the appropriate authority. Colorado River, according to the plurality, "in no way undermined the conclusion of Brillhart that the decision whether to defer to the concurrent jurisdiction of a state court is, in the last analysis, a matter committed to the district court's discretion." Will, supra, at 664. Justice Blackmun, concurring in the judgment, criticized the plurality for not recognizing that Colorado River had undercut the "sweeping language" of Brillhart. 437 U.S. at 667. Four Justices in dissent urged that the Colorado River "exceptional circumstances" test supplied the governing standard.

The plurality's suggestion in Will that Brillhart might have application beyond the context of declaratory judgments was rejected by the Court in Moses H. Cone Memorial Hospital v. Mercury Constr. Corp., 460 U.S. 1, 74 L. Ed. 2d 765, 103 S. Ct. 927 (1983). In Moses H. Cone, the Court established that the Colorado River "exceptional circumstances" test, rather than the more permissive Brillhart analysis, governs a district court's decision to stay a suit to compel arbitration under § 4 of the Arbitration Act in favor of pending state litigation. Noting that the combination of Justice Blackmun and the four dissenting Justices in Will had made five to require application of Colorado River, the Court rejected the argument that Will had worked any substantive changes in the law. "Abdication of the obligation to decide cases," the Court reasoned, "can be justified . . . only in the exceptional circumstance where the [***223] order to the parties to repair to the State court would clearly serve an important countervailing interest." 460 U.S. at 14, quoting Colorado River, supra, at 813. As it had in Colorado River, the Court articulated nonexclusive factors relevant to the existence of such exceptional circumstances, including the assumption by either court of jurisdiction [*286] over a res, the relative convenience of the fora, avoidance of piecemeal litigation, the order in which jurisdiction was obtained by the concurrent fora, whether and to what extent federal law provides the rules of decision on the merits, and the adequacy of state proceedings. Evaluating each of these factors, the Court concluded that the District Court's stay of federal proceedings was, under the circumstances, inappropriate.

[***LEdHR1C] LedHN[1C] [1C] Relying on these post-Brillhart developments, London Underwriters contend that the Brillhart regime, under which district courts have substantial latitude in deciding whether to stay or to dismiss a declaratory judgment suit in light of pending state proceedings (and need not point to "exceptional circumstances" to justify their actions), is an outmoded relic of another era. We disagree. Neither Colorado River, which upheld the dismissal of federal proceedings, nor Moses H. Cone, which did not, dealt with actions brought under the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2201(a) (1988 ed., Supp. V). HN4 Distinct features of the Declaratory Judgment Act, we believe, justify a standard vesting district courts with greater discretion in declaratory judgment actions than that permitted under the "exceptional circumstances" test of Colorado River and Moses H. Cone. No subsequent case, in our view, has called into question the application of the Brillhart standard to the Brillhart facts.

Since its inception, HN5 the Declaratory Judgment Act has been understood to confer on federal courts unique and substantial discretion in deciding whether to declare the rights of litigants. On its face, the statute provides that a court "may declare the rights and other legal relations of any interested party seeking such declaration," 28 U.S.C. § 2201(a) (1988 ed., Supp. V) (emphasis added). See generally E. Borchard, Declaratory Judgments 312-314 (2d ed. 1941); Borchard, Discretion to Refuse Jurisdiction of Actions for Declaratory Judgments, 26 Minn. L. Rev. 677 (1942). The statute's textual commitment to discretion, and the breadth [*287] of leeway we have always understood it to suggest, distinguish the declaratory judgment context from other areas of the law in which concepts of discretion surface. See generally Shapiro, Jurisdiction and Discretion, 60 N. Y. U. L. Rev. 543 (1985); cf. O. Fiss & D. Rendleman, Injunctions 106-108 (2d ed. 1984) (describing courts' nonstatutory discretion, [**2143] through application of open-ended substantive standards like "irreparable injury," in the injunction context). We have repeatedly characterized HN6 the Declaratory Judgment Act as "an enabling Act, which confers a discretion on the courts rather than an absolute right upon the litigant." Public Serv. Comm'n of Utah v. Wycoff Co., 344 U.S. 237, 241, 97 L. Ed. 291, 73 S. Ct. 236 (1952); see also Green v. Mansour, 474 U.S. 64, 72, 88 L. Ed. 2d 371, 106 S. Ct. 423 (1985); Cardinal Chemical Co. v. Morton Int'l, Inc., [***224] 508 U.S. 83, 95, n.

17, 124 L. Ed. 2d 1, 113 S. Ct. 1967 (1993). When all is said and done, we have concluded, "the propriety of declaratory relief in a particular case will depend upon a circumspect sense of its fitness informed by the teachings and experience concerning the functions and extent of federal judicial power." Wycoff, supra, at 243.

[***LEdHR5] LEdHN[5] [5] Acknowledging, as they must, the unique breadth of this discretion to decline to enter a declaratory judgment, London Underwriters nonetheless contend that, after Colorado River and Moses H. Cone, district courts lack discretion to decline to hear a declaratory judgment suit at the outset. See Brief for Petitioners 22 ("District courts must hear declaratory judgment cases absent exceptional circumstances; district courts may decline to enter the requested relief following a full trial on the merits, if no beneficial purpose is thereby served or if equity otherwise counsels"). We are not persuaded by this distinction. London Underwriters' argument depends on the untenable proposition that a district court, knowing at the commencement of litigation that it will exercise its broad statutory discretion to decline declaratory relief, must nonetheless go through the futile exercise of hearing a case on the merits first. Nothing in the language of the Declaratory Judgment Act recommends London [*288] Underwriters' reading, and we are unwilling to impute to Congress an intention to require such a wasteful expenditure of judicial resources. If a district court, in the sound exercise of its judgment, determines after a complaint is filed that a declaratory judgment will serve no useful purpose, it cannot be incumbent upon that court to proceed to the merits before staying or dismissing the action.

[***LEdHR6] LEdHN[6] [6] We agree, for all practical purposes, with Professor Borchard, who observed half a century ago that "there is . . . nothing automatic or obligatory about the assumption of 'jurisdiction' by a federal court" to hear a declaratory judgment action. Borchard, Declaratory Judgments, at 313. By the Declaratory Judgment Act, Congress sought to place a remedial arrow in the district court's quiver; it created an opportunity, rather than a duty, to grant a new form of relief to qualifying litigants. HN7 Consistent with the nonobligatory nature of the remedy, a district court is authorized, in the sound exercise of its discretion, to stay or to dismiss an action seeking a declaratory judgment before trial or after all arguments have drawn to a close. <sup>2</sup> In the declaratory judgment context, the normal principle that federal courts should adjudicate claims within their jurisdiction yields to considerations of practicality and wise judicial administration.

FOOTNOTES

<sup>2</sup> We note that where the basis for declining to proceed is the pendency of a state proceeding, a stay will often be the preferable course, because it assures that the federal action can proceed without risk of a time bar if the state case, for any reason, fails to resolve the matter in controversy. See, e. g., P. Bator, D. Meltzer, P. Mishkin, & D. Shapiro, Hart and Wechsler's The Federal Courts and the Federal System 1451, n. 9 (3d ed. 1988).

III

[***LEdHR2B] LEdHN[2B] [2B] As Judge Friendly observed, the Declaratory Judgment Act "does not speak," on its face, to the question whether discretion to entertain declaratory judgment actions is [***225] vested in district courts alone or in the entire judicial system. Friendly, Indiscretion about Discretion, 31 Emory L. [*289] J. 747, 778 (1982). The Court of Appeals reviewed the District Court's decision to stay London Underwriters' action for abuse of discretion, and found none. London Underwriters urge us to follow those other Courts of Appeals that review decisions to grant (or to refrain from granting) declaratory relief de novo. See, e. g., Genentech, Inc. v. Eli Lilly & Co., 998 F.2d at 936; Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. Holbrook, [**2144] 867 F.2d at 1333. We decline this invitation. We believe it more consistent with the statute to vest district courts with discretion in the first instance, because facts bearing on the usefulness of the declaratory judgment remedy, and the fitness of the case for resolution, are peculiarly within their grasp. Cf. First Options of Chicago, Inc. v. Kaplan, 514 U.S. 938, 948, 131 L. Ed. 2d 985, 115 S. Ct. 1920 (1995) ("The reviewing attitude that a court of appeals takes toward a district court decision should depend upon 'the respective institutional advantages of trial and appellate courts'" (citation omitted)); Miller v. Fenton, 474 U.S. 104, 114, 88 L. Ed. 2d 405, 106 S. Ct. 445 (1985) ("The fact/law distinction at times has turned on a determination that, as a matter of the sound administration of justice, one judicial actor is better positioned than another to decide the issue in question"). While it may be true that sound administration of the Declaratory Judgment Act calls for the exercise of "judicial discretion, hardened by experience into rule," Borchard, Declaratory Judgments, at 293, proper application of the abuse of discretion standard on appellate review can, we think, provide appropriate guidance to district courts. In this regard, we reject London Underwriters' suggestion, Brief for Petitioners 14, that review for abuse of discretion "is tantamount to no review" at all.

IV

***LEdHR1D LEdHN[1D] [1D] ***LEdHR2C LEdHN[2C] [2C] ***LEdHR3B LEdHN[3B] [3B] In sum, we conclude that Brillhart v. Excess Ins. Co. of America, 316 U.S. 491, 86 L. Ed. 1620, 62 S. Ct. 1173 (1942), governs this declaratory judgment action and that district courts' decisions about the propriety of hearing declaratory judgment actions, which are necessarily bound up with their decisions about the propriety [*290] of granting declaratory relief, should be reviewed for abuse of discretion. We do not attempt at this time to delineate the outer boundaries of that discretion in other cases, for example, cases raising issues of federal law or cases in which there are no parallel state proceedings. Like the Court of Appeals, we conclude only that the District Court acted within its bounds in staying this action for declaratory relief where parallel proceedings, presenting opportunity for ventilation of the same state law issues, were underway in state court. The judgment of the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit is

Affirmed.

JUSTICE BREYER took no part in the consideration or decision of this case.

REFERENCES

22A Am Jur 2d, Declaratory Judgments 16, 21, 244, 245

10 Federal Procedure, L Ed, Declaratory Judgments 23:6-23:8, 23:15, 23:16, 23:35, 23:61, 23:62

8 Federal Procedural Forms, L Ed, Declaratory Judgments 21:19, 21:24-21:28, 21:40, 21:47, 21:50, 21:53, 21:55

28 USCS 2201(a)

L Ed Digest, Appeal 1382; Declaratory Judgments 3

L Ed Index, Appeal and Error; Declaratory Judgment

ALR Index, Appeal and Error; Declaratory Judgments or Relief

Annotation References:

Stay of action in federal court until determination of similar action pending in state court. 5 ALR Fed 10.

Extent to which principles of res judicata are applicable to judgments in actions for declaratory relief. 10 ALR2d 782.

Service: Get by LEXSEE®

Citation: 515 U.S. 277

View: Full

Date/Time: Monday, January 7, 2013 - 11:01 AM EST

* Signal Legend:

-  - Warning: Negative treatment is indicated
-  - Questioned: Validity questioned by citing refs
-  - Caution: Possible negative treatment
-  - Positive treatment is indicated
-  - Citing Refs. With Analysis Available
-  - Citation information available

* Click on any Shepard's signal to Shepardize® that case.

In

About LexisNexis | Privacy Policy | Terms & Conditions | Contact Us
Copyright © 2013 LexisNexis, a division of Reed Elsevier Inc. All rights reserved.